- Desperately seeks to belong to a 'family' but can't admit it

BLACKLIST

PERSONAL STORY & JOURNEY

Torres was raised by a single mother in a harsh, developing South American town. As a Black List soldier, she prepared him to follow in her footsteps almost from the time he was walking, seeing in him a potential to be "someone bigger". He enlisted in Black List at the first opportunity, but it was short lived. His mother's murder at the hands of Global Risk cast him into deep despair. He abandoned his military duty and turned to a life of crime, bastardizing the notion of 'bigger' to become a thief known on the streets as The Phantom for his ability to never get caught.

His life hovered at rock bottom for nearly a year, filled with self-destructive behavior and guilt. He blamed himself for not protecting his mother and giving up on the legacy she worked so hard to make a reality for him.

Torres's winding route is one of self-discovery and acceptance of his destiny, turning both his mother's legacy and Fontaine's manipulation of him into a life he can fully accept and own.

When targeted by Maddox and Global Risk early in the story, he is stuck in self-preservation mode. Even when asked by Niklas to join the fight in the hospital, Torres is reticent even though he already believes in Black List's cause. Torres can only think of his own needs. Forging bonds through battle with Logan, Cora, Niklas, and even Sonja, give Torres a renewed desire to not only join Black List, but see value in saving his fellow soldiers. Through lessons learned from all his close relationships he finds the courage to accept that his 'bigger' purpose means sacrificing his own life so that his Black List ideals and family can survive.

PERSONAL STORY & JOURNEY

Maddox cut his teeth as a Navy SEAL during the Second Gulf War, earning numerous citations of valor and a place in the infamous U.S. counter-terrorism force, SEAL Team Six. He was one of the members of the team that raided and killed Osama Bin Laden in 2011. Abandoning the modesty most SEALs exhibit, Maddox positioned himself as the public face of the Western anti-terrorism movement, artificially elevating his own status to that of a savior. Global Risk recruited him a few years later to bolster their position and influence during the worldwide shift to mercenary forces.

His ultra-conservative media posturing and belief in American Exceptionalism led him to promote doctrines of rapid domination through excessive force and Shock and Awe tactics. Everyone in Global Risk knows and reveres him (or fears him), but few feel genuinely connected to him. His strongest ally is found in Sonja, his Chief Science Officer, and a number of loyal followers known as his "Mad Dogs". He believes a lasting peace and 'utopian future' are possible but only through the complete elimination of "terrorist" forces like Black List. Ironically, he's tormented by the idea that a man like him who knows only war may not have a place in the utopia he strives so hard to create.

His path through this story is a sharp descent into insanity, fueled by the success of Torres and his Black List allies and the secret manipulation by The Organization who want him dead. He begins as a stalwart voice for Global Risk's plans to dismantle Black List, but with every setback he turns more brutal and violent until he snaps and orchestrates the killing of his own troops, ultimately leading to his downfall when Torres and Sonja team up to stop him.

Hacking

GOAL

Save the world by preventing the nanovirus outbreak in the future

CHARACTER ARC

Sharp descent from trusted security expert to traitor

TRAITS

- Acerbic wit often gets her in trouble
- Driven by a need to prove herself right and force others toward justice
- Wanted felon in the U.S. for breach of national security
- Playful demeanor
- Digital espionage expert
- Feisty and closed off when asked personal questions

PERSONAL STORY & JOURNEY

Cora is a self-taught computer systems analyst and hacker. Her aptitude for circumventing security systems led to her being hired as a security advisor and developer for DARPA before she finished high school. Within the first month of employment she intentionally crippled their internal network to prove their defenses extremely vulnerable to attack, earning her the nickname "Crash". She was immediately arrested but escaped prison by hacking a stolen cell phone off a prison guard. She then fled to South America and was recruited by Black List.

Cagey about her past, her psychological profile suggests habitual abuse scarring her formative years making her unable to truly trust or connect with anyone. Cora wears the depth of her mind on her sleeves for the entire world to see, and her ego won't let others forget she's the most intelligent person in any room.

She grew tired of Fontaine's cryptic missions, so Cora hacked the Black List network to view the classified Catalyst predictions of the future. Now secretly knowing the Ghost Kit leads to a ravaging nanovirus outbreak, she works to prevent the Ghost Kit from existing. Fearing she will be imprisoned or possibly killed by Black List, she works in secret to sabotage missions and hinder progress of the Ghost technology. When Torres is able to assemble a Ghost Kit and uses it in the raid on the Black List base, she has no option but to expose her betrayal and attempt to kill him in hopes of saving the future. When that fails, and she barely escapes with her life, she is exiled from Black List and recruited into The Organization as they are striving for the same future.

Sonja

CONFLICTED IDEALIST

PERSONAL STORY & JOURNEY

Sonja and her younger brother Niklas were orphaned when their parents were executed as resistance fighters in the Sierra Leone civil war. A European couple on a humanitarian trip to the region adopted them both and took them back home to be raised in Sweden.

Sonja never forgot her roots and to this day voices strong opposition to any oppression in developing nations. She joined Global Risk believing their mission to eradicate terrorism throughout the world would prevent atrocities like the one that defined her childhood. She was star struck when she first met Maddox – the public face of Western anti-terrorism – and their shared beliefs bonded them in no time. Her and her brother took diverging paths into mercenary forces with conflicting ideologies, ironically for the same reason. She hides the fact her brother enlisted in Black List, fearing it will endanger her career. She has yet to forgive him for “betraying” their parents’ memory.

Sonja’s journey is the coming of age story of an extremely brilliant woman who needs to define the limits of her beliefs and learn to stand behind them. In the beginning she is a devout follower of Maddox, and, like most in Global Risk, believe that Black List is a terrorist organization that needs to be dismantled to better the world. Through finding common ground with Torres, a growing threat against her brother’s life, and ultimately Maddox’s extremism threatening Global Risk itself, she discovers the will to stand against her most trusted ally. She finally sees the Black List and Global Risk agendas for what they truly are, and helps to defeat Maddox, saving Global Risk from destruction. Then assuming command, Sonja becomes the leader she was always destined to become.

Heavy Weapons

GOAL

Follow orders to protect Torres and save Black List

CHARACTER ARC

Rise from a "failure" to a redeemed soldier

TRAITS

- Brutish exterior hiding a tormented soul
- Prides himself on physical perfection
- Commanding demeanor
- Virtual encyclopedia of military weapons and ammunition
- Sees himself as a protector of Torres even before story begins
- A man of few words; speaks through his actions

PERSONAL STORY & JOURNEY

From when he was a child, Logan always knew he was destined to be a soldier. With his parent's blessing he emancipated himself to join the Army when he was only 16 years old. When the Second American Civil War broke out, Logan served with the Army Rangers out of Fort Lewis. The operations and vitriol of that war transformed Logan in ways he never could have foreseen. He grew up idolizing American soldiers and their honorable defense of a great nation, but in the civil war he was fighting his own people. Clear lines of right and wrong vanished in the fog of wars he didn't want to fight.

Eventually, disillusionment in the military whims of superpowers drove Logan to join Black List. There he found a purpose and the type of family bonds he expected out of military service. He could follow orders without shame or guilt. Until, that is, years later when he was assigned a protection detail on one of their own, Torres' mother. He let his guard down for a moment one afternoon, and she was killed by Global Risk. He sees this as his greatest failure, for which he owes a debt he can likely never repay.

Logan's quest in this story is to execute his orders to save Black List and hold the troops under his command together at any cost. Once he learns Torres is a key to Black List's survival, he sees an opportunity to redeem himself by protecting Torres, thus keeping his dead mother's legacy alive. After thwarting multiple attacks on Torres's life, he ultimately opts to sacrifice himself to ensure Torres continues on.

GOAL

Find a way to truly help Black List survive

CHARACTER ARC

Background support role to key member in the fight to stop Maddox

TRAITS

- Intense desire to prove himself and eliminate tyranny in the world
- Exceptional stamina
- Brooding
- Introspective and reserved
- Trained in explosives and bomb disarming/disposal
- Prides himself in a lack of fear

PERSONAL STORY & JOURNEY

Niklas lived a life of suffering in Sierra Leone with his parents and older sister, Sonja. His first memory is of his parents' execution at the hands of a warlord when he was three years old. Shortly after, he and Sonja were adopted by a family and moved to Sweden where they focused his frustrations and energy into more positive outlets. But the constant nightmares of his parents' murder haunted him and fueled conflict between him and his sister. Although sharing a deep seeded hatred of tyranny, Niklas often argued with Sonja creating a vast ideological divide between them.

While Sonja kept her adoptive Swedish surname, Niklas changed back to his birth surname of Jabari as a show of allegiance to his roots. He enlisted in Black List believing oppressors are overthrown by empowering the people they enslave to rise up against their subjugation.

Raised in Europe but with scars of violent African oppression coursing through his veins, Niklas is searching for his place in Black List – wanting more than anything to empower others to save themselves.

Niklas operates in a support role in this story, as desperate to positively impact the defense of Black List against annihilation as he is to keep the knowledge his sister is an officer in Global Risk a secret. Always striving to prove his worth to his Black List comrades, Niklas advances through the story as a stranger, ally, friend, potential traitor, and finally to critical element to Black List's success, all the while building a brotherly bond with Torres along the way.

GOAL

Realize Catalyst prophecy to create the Ghost Kit to save Black List

CHARACTER ARC

From terrified her cause and legacy will disappear to confident they will persevere; transcendence

TRAITS

- Cold, icy demeanor masking deep feelings of attachment and caring
- Tactical mastermind willing to deceive anyone to achieve a goal
- Brilliant psychoanalyst
- Obsessed with saving Black List
- Knows she is absent from Catalyst images of the future, strives to create a legacy

PERSONAL STORY & JOURNEY

Injuries sustained at the end of Operation: First Frost left Fontaine paralyzed from the waist down and barely clinging to life. Her recovery was swift but the damage was done. She was forced to accept her days doing field work are over, and she is bound to the Black List Command Center and a wheelchair.

Wracked by depression brought on by this change in her career trajectory, Fontaine set out to ensure the Catalyst mission was not in vain and yields the best possible intel. Her astute findings mapped out numerous possible future events. She eventually had a horrible revelation: of the hundreds of Catalyst images they retrieved none feature her at all, implying she doesn't survive much longer. Uncertain of how much time she has left, Fontaine is focused on saving Black List from annihilation and preserving her legacy in the process. Her legacy being the creation of the Ghost Kit, a weapon foretold to even the balance of power between Black List and Global Risk in the coming wars.

In this story, Fontaine again operates in the background, manipulating her people from the shadows, but her machinations and relationships are far more visible than before. Every mission, every interaction she is a leading focus on assembling a functional Ghost Kit: ordering the rescue of Torres, secretly injecting him with nanomachines, orchestrating the theft of the power source, and even indirectly influencing Torres to sacrifice himself to become the Ghost. All of this is the results of puppet strings pulled by Fontaine.
